A corrections officer working at a prison in Norfolk was indicted recently for stealing more than $8,000 from area vending machines. Donald Packard, 36, of Brockton, was indicted Friday by a Norfolk County grand jury, according to the attorney general's office. Packard allegedly kept his vending machine key after leaving his prior job with the vending company. He used the key to access machines in Dedham, Norwood and Westwood, authorities said. METRO

Boston gets enlightened with Dalai Lama visit

► The Dalai Lama visits Boston to talk love, compassion, forgiveness and peace, man ► The T, Red Sox fans and spirituality can really coexist

ERIN BALDASSARI/METRO

The Hub is getting a big dose of spirituality this week thanks to His Holiness the 14th Dalai Lama of Tibet, who kicked off his three-day tour yesterday with a lecture at The Boston Marriott Copley Place.

As thousands of hushed guests hung on the whispered words of the exiled spiritual leader, it seemed obvious that Bostonians are interested in looking inward and finding peace.

The Dalai Lama advised guests to focus on compassion, forgiveness and education as a means to ending ignorance, which can lead to violence.

"I believe the basic nature of human beings is mindful, and the source of our trouble is ignorance," he said.

Each one of us, he said, should feel we have the potential to have compassion and to also make a positive change in "The ultimate source of peace is here," he said, putting his hand over his heart.

Throughout the two-hour event, the Dalai Lama coaxed smiles and laughter from the audience by cracking a few jokes and inspiring with his infectious belly laughs.

"His laugh is incredible. I was more inspired by his laugh than anything else, just because you could get a very real sense of his compassion and self content," said Bryan Kapicka, a student at MIT, as he left yesterday's lecture.

Dalai days

Some of the events the Dalai Lama will be attending this week:

- Today: Panel discussions during "Global Systems 2.0" at Kresge Auditorium, MIT
- Tomorrow: The Dalai Lama will host a teaching session titled "Stages of Meditation: Buddhism for the 21st Century" at Kresge Auditorium at MIT.

Cops arrest boy, 14, for fatal stabbing

BOSTON. A 14-year-old boy was arrested this weekend for the brutal slaying of a 39-year-old man.

The unidentified juvenile from Dorchester was arrested Saturday, Boston police said.

The teen allegedly fatally stabbed Cherby Lajoie to death earlier this month.

Authorities have not discussed a motive and have not commented the relationship between the teen and Lajoie.

Police arrived to Charles Street in Dorchester just after 1 a.m. Oct. 6 and found Lajoie, of Boston, suffering from multiple stab wounds. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

Police are still investigating the crime. METRO

Places to 'omm' out

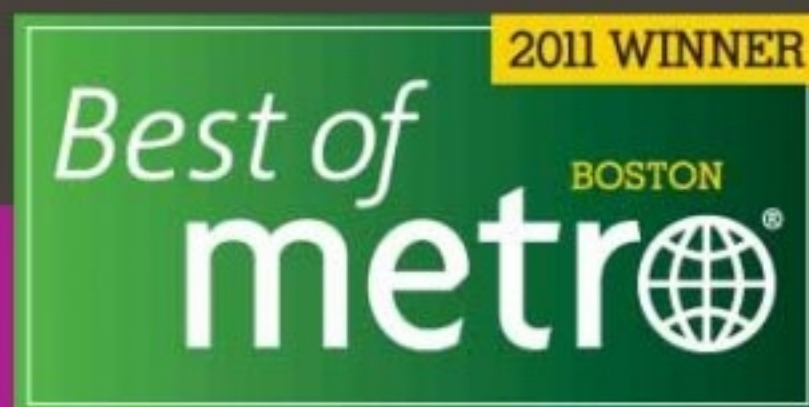

It is easy to feel enlightened this week if you're one of the lucky few to listen to the Dalai Lama give lectures in the Boston area, but inner peace isn't built in a week. The Hub has spots to help residents get their "omm" on after "His Holiness" high-tails it out of town.

The Boston Maum Meditation Center in Arlington teaches a seven-step method to cleanse the mind and body of the ego, the delusion of "self." The process reportedly helps students attain wisdom and better know reality. The center offers free lectures to newcomers on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Mindful Boston on South Street offers stress reduction programs, which include lectures, discussions, meditations and gentle yoga. Even Southie offers a sanctuary for spirituality. Transcendental Meditation Boston teaches a meditation technique that allows the mind to "settle inward, beyond thought."

City worker faces child pornography charges

A veteran city employee will face a judge today to answer to charges that he allegedly possessed and exchanged pornographic pictures of boys.

James Mansfield, 47, is expected to be arraigned on child pornography charges today in Charlestown District Court. He was arrested Friday night in his Charlestown home.

Mansfield has worked for the City of Boston for 28 years and was most recently employed as a manager in the city's transportation department. His title is executive assistant, city officials said, and according to payroll records he made just more than $104,000 last year.

He was arrested by detectives from the Boston Police Department's Crimes Against Children Unit.

An Internet investigation by police led to Mansfield's arrest.

"An Internet investigation revealed Mansfield was engaging in graphically sexual chat and exchanging pictures of boys in various stages of undress," Boston police said.

Police said they executed a search warrant of Mansfield's home and said they uncovered evidence on his personal computer.

Mansfield has been placed on unpaid administrative leave

Mayor Thomas Menino called the alleged actions by Mansfield "heinous."

"It deeply saddens me that anyone could endanger any young person, but to know the individual that allegedly perpetrated these acts is truly devastating," Menino said in a statement. "As a father and grandfather I am at a loss on what to say about this case other than to assure residents that this employee will no longer be employed by the City of Boston and that we will continue to cooperate in the investigation. Without question, this type of behavior is heinous, and many of his colleagues will be shocked by the news and grieving for the victims."

The city is making counselors and outreach workers available at City Hall and in Charlestown where Mansfield "was an involved parent and resident," officials said.

Suspects in BU armed robbery cases are due in court today

COURTESY BROOKLINE POLICE

► The alleged suspects as seen around the time of the third robbery on Oct. 5.

The Boston University community can rest a little easier as the young men who police say are responsible for at least two armed holdups in a recent string of robberies will likely face a judge today.

Taquari Milton, 17, of Roxbury, and an unidentified juvenile were charged on Friday with two of the robberies and were scheduled to be arraigned today in Brookline District Court on two counts of armed robbery.

A third suspect, also an unidentified juvenile, turned himself over to authorities Thursday night when he showed up at the Brookline Police Department with an attorney, police said.

All of the victims of the robberies were BU students or recently graduated from the school.

As fear within the BU community continued to grow after the fourth holdup last week, police released surveillance images of the three suspects and college officials offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of at least

The string of four robberies stretched just over two weeks.

► The first robbery occurred Sept. 23 on Hamilton Road, the second took place Sept. 25 on Egmont Street and the third occurred Oct. 5 on Thatcher Street.

► The most recent incident took place Oct. 9 when a female student walking down Commonwealth Avenue was approached by two young men with a gun.

Police said the teens have been charged in the second and third robberies. However, no one has yet been charged in the other two incidents.

Police are investigating.

Caution still urged

While three suspects were arrested at the end of last week for their alleged role in the robberies, police and university officials still urged students and members of the BU community to be cautious.

"The good news is we have suspects under arrest. However, it doesn't negate the fact that we are in an urban environment," Boston University Police Chief Thomas Robbins told BU Today. The officials also stressed that no one has yet been charged in two of the four robberies. Police have said to be aware of surroundings when out and to try to walk in big groups, especially at night.

Economic distress 3.0 looms as emerging world markets falter

The global economy is facing its third major brake on expansion in five years as emerging markets slow from China to Brazil, provoking debate about how much policy makers should respond.

Three years after industrializing nations led the world out of the U.S. mortgage meltdown-induced recession, the reliability of the power source is waning as Europe's debt crisis persists. The International Monetary Fund sees them growing an average 5.8 percent in the half-decade through 2016, almost two percentage points less than the five years before the 2009 slump.

"There is a concern that in the near term the engine of growth that provided such a great support seems to be slowing. ... They still continue to grow, but we're seeing a slower pace than anticipated all over the world."

Apple may unveil new smaller iPad tablet next week, source says

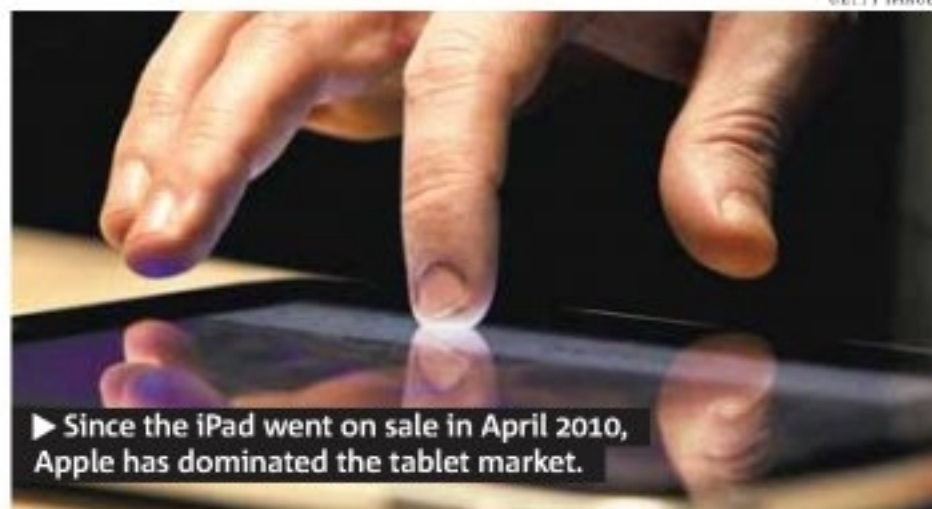

Apple Inc. may unveil a smaller version of the iPad at an event Oct. 23, according to a person familiar with the matter who asked not to be named because the plans aren't public.

The new model will have a screen that's 7 inches to 8 inches diagonally, less than the current 9.7-inch version, people familiar with the designs said in July. A smaller, less expensive iPad could undercut the tablet ambitions of Google, Microsoft and Amazon.com, according to Shaw Wu, an analyst at Sterne Agee & Leach Inc.

Google's Nexus 7 tablet and some versions of Amazon's Kindle Fire with 7-inch screens cost $199. Apple will likely price the mini at $299 or $349, Wu said.

"These competitors have a tough enough time competing against the 10-inch iPad," Wu said in a telephone interview today. The lower-priced iPad model "will make the competition even tougher. It tells you how hard it is to beat Apple. These other companies have to either lose money or break even on these products."

▶ Since the iPad went on sale in April 2010, Apple has dominated the tablet market.

Trudy Muller, a spokeswoman for Cupertino, California-based Apple, didn't return a call seeking comment.

While the smaller iPad may hamper market entries by Google and Microsoft, it may also attract price-conscious consumers who might have otherwise bought another Apple product, such as the $299 iPod Touch or the $399 iPad 2, said Brian Marshall, an analyst at ISI Group. BLOOMBERG

Dems find ammo in farm bill angst

Democrats fighting an uphill battle to win a majority in Congress are trying to use rural angst over the failure of congressional Republicans to pass a farm bill to win some Midwestern seats in the Nov. 6 election.

SENIOR EDITORIAL WRITER,
THE WASHINGTON EXAMINER

BEYOND POLITICS: OUR DISMAL ECONOMIC REALITY

"Mr. President, you're entitled to your own airplane and your own house," Mitt Romney said at the first presidential debate in Denver earlier this month, "but not your own facts." This play on the late Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan's famous quote, "Everyone is entitled to his own opinion, but not to his own facts," is normally true. But not this month. Not when it comes to economic facts at least.

On the first Friday of this month, the Labor Department published results from two surveys that depicted two completely different economic realities in the United States. Which report Americans choose to believe will go a long way in determining who will win the election next month.

The report most favorable to President Obama, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics' Current Population Survey (aka the household survey), found that 873,000 Americans got new jobs last month. That is the most jobs created ever reported by the household survey since 1983. And it is the sole reason the nation's unemployment went from 8.1 percent down to 7.8 percent.

How credible is that 873,000 jobs created number? As Wells Fargo analysts noted, September's supposed household survey jobs gain was "more than four times the size of the average change over the past 12 months." The last time the U.S. economy created that many jobs, in June of 1983, the economy was growing at 9.3 percent. Today, GDP is growing at just 1.3 percent.

Wells Fargo referred to the 873,000 jobs growth number as "a black swan outlier." Gallup's chief economist, Dennis Jacob, said the household survey "seems to lack face-validity." This is what economic experts are saying about the economic report that Obama is using to make his closing argument to the American people.

Meanwhile, the report less favorable to Obama — the BLS Current Employment Statistics program (aka the employer survey) — showed just 114,000 jobs created in September. Not only was this report almost perfectly in line with what analysts were expecting, it was also consistent with what other economic indicators have been showing: Instead of getting better, the U.S. economy is actually getting worse. (For reference, when the household survey showed nearly a million new jobs were created in

Quoted

Since the economy stopped losing jobs in October 2010, we have been averaging 150,000 jobs created per month. But over the last six months, job growth has slowed to just 106,000 jobs a month. The Atlanta Federal Reserve estimates that we need 100,000 new jobs a month just to keep up with population growth.

June 1983, the employer survey did not diverge nearly as much, pointing to 418,000 new jobs.)

Since the economy stopped losing jobs in October 2010, we have been averaging 150,000 jobs created per month, according to the employer survey. But over the last six months, job growth has slowed to just 106,000 jobs a month. The Atlanta Federal Reserve estimates that we need 100,000 new jobs a month just to keep up with population growth. That means if the current rate of weak job growth continues, roughly 8 percent unemployment is the new normal. Worse, if the rate of net job creation continues to slow, as it has been doing for months, unemployment will tick up again.

So which report should voters believe? The household survey, showing rates of job creation not seen since the height of the Reagan recovery? Or the employer survey, showing the U.S. economy slowly sinking into another recession? Democrats have clearly decided to trust the household survey data. According to Gallup, consumer confidence has skyrocketed to prerecession levels ... but interestingly, only among Democrats. Consumer confidence among Republicans and Independents is actually falling — and with good reason. If Obama is reelected president, the American people are facing a $500 billion tax hike starting Jan. 1, which the Tax Policy Center estimates would translate into a $3,500 tax hike for the average American family. The payroll tax hike alone, which Obama and the Democrats have specifically said they will let happen, would take $1,000 a year from the average American paycheck — from the poor and rich alike. The Congressional Budget Office predicts that these tax hikes, along with $100 billion in scheduled spending cuts, would cause unemployment to shoot back up above 9 percent. That's economic reality no American wants to be part of.

"This is the first book to talk openly about teaching outside of your expertise. Most books assume the opposite. So I had to look at the empirical literature differently to find research that might be relevant. I wanted to continually ask: 'Who does the best teaching — and under what circumstances?'" says Huston. "There are strategies for managing the time. That's a big concern: Not only do you want to know that your students are learning, but you want to make sure you can do this and have enough time to sleep."

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Madonna and Penn reunite

Forget the rumors of "Beverly Hills 90210" actors Luke Perry and Jennie Garth falling back in love after reuniting for an Old Navy commercial — here's a pop culture reunion that's much, much juicier. On Thursday, Sean Penn sat "front and center" at ex-wife Madonna's Staples Center concert and even visited her backstage.

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

► We remember their union just like it was yesterday. But the real question is: Do they?

An extremely excited (and pervertedly descriptive) source tells RadarOnline that during the concert, Madonna "stared Sean dead in the face, smiled, unzipped her pants, and mooned the crowd, but it was really like she was mooning Sean!" The source added that "he laughed and clutched his chest like he was going to pass out. She was wearing a black lacey thong, and her butt looked perfect! So smooth and tight ... like a 20-year-old's!"

After the show, Penn was spotted backstage "gushing" over his ex. "Sean was like a teenage boy meeting his idol," another eyewitness told the site. "It was amusing and kind of cute."

Penn and Madonna were married from 1985 to 1989; it was, by all accounts, a tumultuous relationship fraught with court cases, fights and the amazing disaster that was "Shanghai Surprise."

But, hey — perhaps the past 30 years have mellowed out the stars. Oh, man — like an adult who continues to hold out hope that their divorced parents will get back together despite living in different states for 20 years, I want this so much.

► Coming to New Jersey in 2013?

Psy and Bon Jovi? Yes, please

In a revealing article in The New York Times, Psy, the Korean pop sensation responsible for "Gangnam Style," comes clean about his celebrity obsession: Bon Jovi.

"Every musician in Korea, we learn from your pop — we get inspired," he told the paper. "I was at the iHeart-Radio festival in Las Vegas, and when I walked down the hallway someone stopped me and said, 'Are you Psy?' And he said, 'I'm Jon Bon Jovi.' I grew up listening to Bon Jovi since 'You Give Love a Bad Name,' so this was a really touching moment. We took a picture and he uploaded it on his Facebook. It's unbelievable."

Makes sense: They both ride different types of horses. Bon Jovi's is a steel one, while Psy's is imaginary.

Talking points

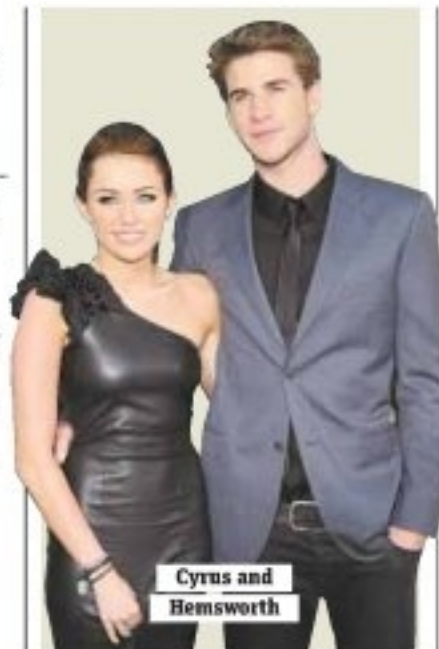

Kutcher and Kunis continue New York love campaign

Ashton Kutcher and Mila Kunis continue to sweep New York with their public displays of affection, this time treating themselves to some gelato in the West Village, according to People magazine. "When they walked out, Ashton fed Mila some of her ice cream," an eyewitness says. "They were very cute together." Kutcher has been staying with Kunis while she films a new movie in NYC, and while there, they've done little to hide their new-couple status.

Why did DeVito and Perlman split?

Danny DeVito and Rhea Perlman separated last week after 30 years of marriage, and Radar Online insists DeVito's reported tendency to romance extras on his film sets is part of the reason — and he's apparently been at it a long time. One former colleague claims DeVito was up to no good as far back as 1990's "Hoffa," where he reportedly hooked up with a young blonde. "It was kind of pathetic because she was very young and beautiful and obviously just having sex with him in hopes that he'd make her a star," the source says. DeVito's rep, however, refutes the claims of philandering. "[Danny and Rhea] separated," the rep says. "No reason was ever given. Everything is unfounded speculation."

Cyrus and Hemsworth

Cyrus and Hemsworth get inked together

They've already proven their devotion to each other by getting engaged and adopting more than enough dogs, but Miley Cyrus and fiancé Liam Hemsworth apparently wanted to go a step further by getting complementary tattoos. In July, Cyrus had an excerpt from a Theodore Roosevelt speech inked on her forearm. Hemsworth has since gotten the rest of the quote tattooed on his forearm, according to Hollyscoop. Hemsworth's arm reads, "If he fails, at least fails while daring greatly," while Cyrus' arm continues, "so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who neither know victory nor defeat."

The Moth prepares to land in Boston tonight

► The host of one of the most popular podcasts on the StorySLAM, which will have a monthly local presence at Oberon ► Storytelling is 'a weirdly level playing field,' says Dan Kennedy

Dan Kennedy estimates he listened to about 40 stories last week. He's been involved with the storytelling phenomena known as The Moth for the past 13 years, but he says he's often moved by what he hears.

"I'll be sitting next to our producer, Jenifer Hixon, beside the stage, and I'll still hear stories every night that just make me poke her in the ribs and go, 'Oh my God,'" he says.

Kennedy hosts The Moth podcast, which is consistently one of iTunes' top 10 most downloaded podcasts, and he hosts many of the live events that the organization presents in various cities. The Moth has showcased some of its brightest touring artists with its mainstage show in Boston, but tonight is the first time a Moth StorySLAM has come here.

With the StorySLAM, interested attendees put their names in a hat and 10 will be called onstage to tell a five-

SARA STACEE

► Dan Kennedy, who is also known for writing the book, "Rock On: An Office Power Ballad," says that when he discovered The Moth, he was living in New York City and was in what he laughingly calls "a fairly focused but arguably not stable period."

minute story within the night's given theme. Tonight's theme is chemistry. Tellers also are not allowed to use notes or props.

"I often describe it as a cross between an audio book and rehab," says Kennedy, "or between therapy and public radio. It's amazingly and strangely affirming. I've made this joke probably too many times on stage, but there's this certain point in the evening where I just wish we all lived together. I just wish all 400 of us had a huge A-frame somewhere in the mountains and we'd just move forward now in this life together."

The beauty of The Moth is that it's often ordinary people telling extraordinary stories, although sometimes a well-known teller will take the stage.

"I do love the fact that life is kind of a weirdly level playing field when it comes to telling stories," says Kennedy. "It does not have to be that you were in this amazingly incredible, spectacular, once-in-a-lifetime situation. That's the case sometimes, but it doesn't seem to be a common denominator in a mix of stories, which is captivating and I think is cool."

Telling tales

The Moth isn't the only storytelling game in town. A few other places in the Hub where you can share true-life tales:

Massmouth: Massmouth hosts several slams each month, including one tonight at Club Passim (47 Palmer St., Cambridge). The atmosphere is convivial and the time between slams is brief enough that if you aren't called up to the mic right away, you'll be able to give it a shot sooner than later. www.massmouth.com

Storyspace: Tellers and listeners gather every Tuesday night at Out of the Blue Art Gallery (106 Prospect St., Cambridge). As New England's longest-running storytelling series, this organization is celebrating its 20th anniversary this year. www.storyspace.org

War Virgin: Laura Cannon hosts this event on the final Wednesday of each month at The Living Room (101 Atlantic Ave., Boston). Based on themes she provides, the stories can get raunchy. For more info, find War Virgin on Facebook.

Meaningful from now on

► Beach House on being choosy about commercials, not allowing interviewers to ask about their influences and how fans should go about enjoying their music

Revered by critics and slowly making their way into the mainstream, Baltimore band Beach House have a growing awareness of the burdens of their fame. Careful to protect their image but eager to engage with their fans, Victoria Legrand and Alex Scally have vowed to keep it meaningful as they promote their fourth album, the critically acclaimed "Bloom." So we went deep for this interview while Scally was on a break during their world tour.

If you go

► Beach House
Tonight, 8
Wilbur Theater

www.thewilburtheatre.com

Before doing this interview, your publicist told me not to ask about your influences or ask any of the traditional boring questions. I get it. Do you feel sort of weary about doing these interviews now?

Um, no. You don't want to talk about things that are boring. It's just very natural and sim-

There's been controversy recently surrounding your refusal to let Volkswagen use your music in their commercial and keeping a lid on how much you share your music for those purposes.

Just to clarify "keeping a lid on how much we share our music" — that's not it at all. We love sharing our music, and if that ad had been amazing we may have done it. The ad was terrible. It's more taste and it's more use. If a song is used well, it's exciting to us. It could make a commercial better or a product better, or maybe we like the thing that they're trying to sell. Trying to be uncommercial is not one of our goals. We're a commercial band. We sell our records. We want to communicate to people as much as possible, but on our own terms.

Quoted

"Trying to be uncommercial is not one of our goals. We're a commercial band. We sell our records. We want to communicate to people as much as possible, but on our own terms." SCALLY

ple. ... Whenever you get questions like "What are your influences?" I always tend to think that's just someone who hasn't really listened to the music. We kind of made a conscious decision, after so many years of doing this band, we only want to do things that are meaningful now. We're lucky that we can try to do it that way. No fluff. In other coverage of your music, you've mentioned how there are so many generalizations about what you do — that it's all about tones. Do you think there will ever come a day when you'll swear off reading what people have written about you?

We don't read much of what people have written. ... We feel very lucky that we are asked to do interviews or that people care enough to do it. ... That comment about people paying attention to tones — I think that's bigger than our music. We're talking about a society-wide trend that we've been noticing for a couple of years — people just creating music based just only on the vibe of it. The song comes second. The lyrics come second. It's all just a bunch of sound that feels good. There's nothing wrong with that. It's just commenting on it.

It's not engaging on all levels.

Right. When we said that, we were just trying to tell people, well, we spend a lot of time on the songs and the lyrics. Please don't let it be only felt on that level. If you consciously think about it at all, try to go somewhere else with it. It's instructing the listener a little bit.

There are all these online lyric sites — are you annoyed when people list them incorrectly?

Victoria wrote all the lyrics out in the album art, so anyone who really cares will find the correct ones. I think it's kind of interesting how there's so much bad information on the Internet. It's kind of this hilarious thing. It's like this big bathroom wall with 10 billion people writing on it.

When is it time to ditch a frenemy?

No Insurance Necessary

KIM SCHNEIDERMAN, MSW, LCSW

WWW.NOVEL-PERSPECTIVE.COM

What separates friend from "frenemy" is the presence or absence of one essential ingredient: trust.

Trust is the litmus test of any relationship, period. Without trust, there can be no (healthy) relationship. So if you want to distinguish friend or foe, start by asking yourself, "Do I trust this person? Does he or she have my back?"

Don't think too much, just listen to your gut. If your primary response was "no," ask yourself "why?" Was it something this person did or said? If so, and the incidents were minimally to moderately upsetting, try testing your distrust by discussing your feelings with your friend, using specific examples whenever possible.

For instance:

- ▶ When you _____ (didn't return my calls after my cat died)
- ▶ I felt _____ (sad and mad)
- ▶ The result was _____ (I wondered if I could trust you and whether you were truly my friend)
- ▶ I want to know _____ (if you care about me and whether I can count on you when I'm down).

How this conversation goes

should be a pretty good indicator of whether the friendship has mettle.

Now if your gut response to my suggestion is "there's no way I'm doing that," perhaps the trust issues run deeper. Still, it doesn't mean you need to cut the friendship off entirely. Old friendships are usually harder to sever than newer ones, and so long as they aren't toxic, may be worth preserving while minimizing contact.

Are there times to "ditch a frenemy?" Yes. Obviously, if your best friend sleeps with your boyfriend, it's time to say goodbye (to both). But it need not be so extreme. In the way that dead leaves sap the vitality of houseplants, people can benefit from pruning friendships that drain esteem nutrients and prevent growth.

If you feel like your so-called friend constantly undermines, competes with or disrespects you, there's no reason to torture yourself — even for the sake of old times. You can either declare your intention ("This friendship isn't benefiting either of us, so I'm ending it now") or disappear quietly and gracefully. Either way, you're being a good friend to yourself.

News in brief

▶ Staff at the Thorntons Budgens convenience store in North London have their meetings on the roof, enabling workers "to get some fresh air, relax and see things from a different perspective," manager Nathalie Quinn says.

Benefits of the four-day workweek

We should be gardening instead of working on Friday, a British think tank has claimed. The "National Gardening Leave" report from the New Economics Foundation demands that employers introduce a four-day week and growing areas for staff to tend.

"The four-day week has huge benefits for employers," report author Andrew Simms told Metro. "Studies show lower absentee rates and a more motivated workforce, and the business saves money by shutting down for a day." A trial in Utah slashed absentee rates by 14 percent, saving millions of dollars, while the practice has become common in Germany and the Netherlands.

The benefits for workers are more obvious with reduced stress and more free time, Simms says: "For women, especially high-level executives, a shorter week is the only way to balance work and family life."

The report does not suggest gardening should be mandatory, but claims the activity has uniquely wide-ranging benefits including mental and physical health, community cooperation and improving the urban environment by creating green spaces. Simms says gardening is the "new rock and roll," with a cross-demographic appeal shown by growing popularity in inner-city areas. KIERON MONKS

The Thorntons Budgens convenience store in North London has developed a roof garden, and manager Nathalie Quinn told Metro it has transformed the business.

▶ "We have our meetings on the roof, and it enables us to get some fresh air, relax and see things from a different perspective," Quinn said, adding that "we have a mixed cultural background here, and it has helped us connect as a team."

CAMPAIGN FOR A NEW JOB

► Starting your search? ► Take some cues from those running for the country's highest-profile gig

A job search isn't that much different from a political campaign: You must outline a plan for your future and be able to clearly convey your qualifications to potential employers. And although you may not be sweating under the hot lights of a prime-time debate, it can certainly feel like it during an interview. That's why it's best to have a campaign strategy.

Count on your volunteers

Don't be embarrassed to hit up your network and let them know that you're looking to fill a new role at the right company. "Just as politicians rely heavily on their supporters, so should you," says Uva Coles, dean of Career Management Services at Peirce College. "Reach out to those in your circle of influence. Ask them to spread the word about who you are and what you are looking for."

Perfect your image

From their flag pins to their blow-outs, those running for political office put a great deal of effort into presenting the right image. "Dress the part when you are networking at trade shows, meetings or other events," says Bill Corbett, president of Corbett Public Relations. "Be sure to have a quality photo on your LinkedIn profile," he adds.

What about those photos from last night online? "There is nothing wrong with personal photos online," says Corbett. "However, if you have doubts about how you appear in an online photo or video, take it down." Besides, if you're running for president one day, that photo may not be so harmless after all.

► Image-savvy politicians have meticulous campaign strategies — and you should, too.

Get a feel for the field

You need to understand more than just your goals and strengths — you must also understand how your opponents and employers operate. "As with debate preparation, you need to know how the other side thinks," says author and career expert Tracey Wilen-Daugenti. "Research hiring managers, your possible boss and the company itself using online information and social network profiles."

► Facebook wants to be more than friends.

Job seekers are choosing Facebook over Twitter and LinkedIn

LinkedIn may be the social network of choice for the professional world, but more job seekers are hunting for work on Facebook, according to a new survey.

Some 52 percent of job seekers use Facebook to help find work, according to the survey, conducted by recruiting tech firm Jobvite. That's up from 48 percent in Jobvite's survey a year ago. Both used a sample of more than 2,000 adults in the U.S., either unemployed or currently employed and looking for another job.

LinkedIn was used by 38 percent of job seekers, up from 30 percent; Twitter usage in the hunt rose from 26 percent to 34 percent. Both saw major jumps in overall usage among the workforce, while Facebook usage held steady.

There is plenty of consolation for LinkedIn — not least of which is the fact that it just edged out Facebook as the place to tweak your résumé. A quarter of job seekers added professional information to their Facebook account in the last year, but 26 percent did the same to their LinkedIn profile.

Perhaps most surprising, according to the survey, is the fact that dissatisfaction is rampant in the workplace. Three-quarters of the U.S. workforce overall are actively interested in another job.

When job hunting, age is more than just a number

For Millennial Branding's latest research study, we partnered with Beyond.com to survey 5,268 job seekers across generations, including Gen Y (ages 18-29), Gen X (30-47) and Baby Boomers (48-67). While we found that all job seekers are spending most of their time searching online, regardless of age, there are generational differences.

Here are some of the more interesting findings across the three generations:

Generation Y

Gen Y spends more time checking their online reputa-

Trends

DAN SCHAWBEL

tions than older generations. They are more optimistic about finding a job, are finding jobs relatively quicker and value workplace flexibility. Relative to older generations, they are considering going back to school or starting businesses as an alternative to finding a job.

The quality that Gen Y values most in an employer is location, followed by meaningful work and then job security. Before interviews, Gen Y spends the most time practicing hypothetical questions, and they are also more inclined to customize their résumés and cover letters.

Generation X

This age group values job security and has suffered more stress and frustration due to unemployment relative to others. While 72 percent of those surveyed are stressed out from work, 44 percent are depressed from not finding work. Aside from job security, they are looking for employee benefits such as health care.

Baby Boomers

The Boomers prepare for interviews by reviewing the company's website and are more inclined to search for news about the company they are interviewing for. They also feel like they suffer from age discrimination over other generations. Boomers aren't as interested in starting companies or going back to school as alternatives to not finding work.

Debates should address more important issues

RE: "PRESIDENT OBAMA NOT CENTRIST NOR PROGRESSIVE" (METRO, OCT. 12-14) The only thing I concur with news columnist Gregory Kane on is the title of his column. President Obama in fact regularly picks up old right-wing positions and pushes them only to be outflanked to the right by the GOP's "populist" reactionaries whose main agenda seems to be stopping the U.S. government from helping America's poor and middle class. It's shameful that Metro continues to allow Gregory Kane to subject its readers to this tormenting of reality. It's also unfortunate that our national debates are limited to two parties. I suppose if the people never get to hear progressive ideas, they will never move toward sustainability. I want to hear what the candidates will do to address global warming and building a sustainable society.

Not everybody needs somebody

RE: "YES, YOU WANT A RELATIONSHIP: AND THAT'S OK" (METRO, OCT. 11) No, Amber Madison, relationships are not four-letter words, but neither is not having one. The idea that people are unhappier out of relationships than when in one begs the question of why they're unhappy. Just because the sun sets when the street lights go on does not mean the latter causes the former. Darwin was a spokesman for the species, not necessarily for the individual. What sets man above the other animals is his reason, the ability to rise above instinctual needs. The idea that the likes of Schopenhauer (proponent of empathy), Beethoven ("Ode to Joy"), Mother Theresa and Gandhi show an incapacity for love is a bit jarring. Sometimes the "significant other" is man, art, a hobby, science or an abstract idea.

Tax cuts to wealthy exercise in futility

Why do most or some of the 99 percent of Americans believe that the best way to get this economy back on track is to give another huge tax break to the wealthy? The Bush tax cuts for the wealthy did absolutely nothing for the economy. Are we that gullible to go down that road again? Bush and the Republicans did not get it right when they were in charge, even though they controlled the Senate for six of those eight years.

Porn's not all fun and games

RE: "PORN'S A SLIPPERY SLOPE INTO PROBLEMS" (METRO, OCT. 12-14) Letter writer Annie Ferris said, "Women's bodies are so abused that they are permanently ruined at unbelievably young ages. The 'actors' are often involuntary participants, being forced into it for any number of reasons." In addition to that Metro four-page porn spread about "pleasure," the FRONT PAGE was a picture of a woman tied up, followed by third-page news that rapes and sex assault crime rates against women are ALSO increasingly prevalent. Coincidence?

Horoscope

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Anything that is presently running smoothly should not be disturbed at this time, even if you think it should be doing better. Be patient, it will eventually improve much more in time.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. If you haven't been too impressed by the way an associate has been handling a joint endeavor, this is good day to start calling the shots. Implement those marginal changes that need to be made.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. It behooves you to flow with events, because Lady Luck will be trying to put you in the right spot at the right time. Just relax and let the rewards come to you.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Strive to be optimistic and expectant and don't be afraid to think big. The only things holding you back are the limits you put on your thinking.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. You are presently under some influences that could enhance your status and popularity with your peers. Continue to operate the way you've been, because it adds luster to your image.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. It isn't likely that you would make the same types of mistakes some of your peers are making. You've profited from your past experiences.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. In matters that affect more than one of your colleagues, base your final decision on collective reasoning instead of just your own, even if it isn't perfect.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. You could be very clever about figuring out ways to fulfill an ambitious objective. Even having numerous goals won't put you at a disadvantage.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. If certain things in your life haven't been running as smoothly as you'd like, this is an excellent day to reorganize your affairs. Put your dealings in order for maximum efficiency.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Take advantage of this unusually effective time and tackle that tough job you've been putting off. You won't find a better day to take on difficult tasks.

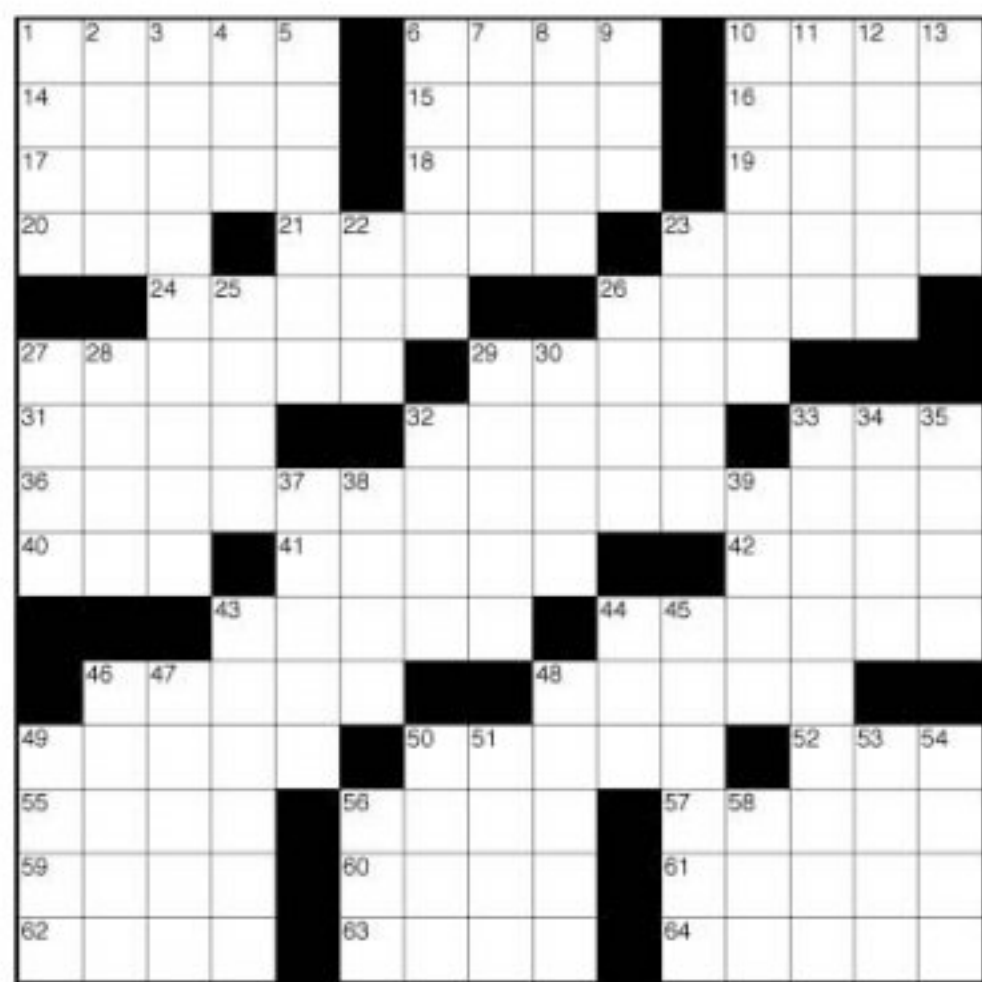

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Because you're such an astute thinker, the ideas you conceive will have unusually high probabilities for success, even those that take a bit of time to develop.

Seahawks 24 | Patriots 23

Next Sunday: vs. Jets, 4:25 p.m., CBS

► Zach Miller and the Seahawks offense had plenty of success against the Patriots defense in the second half yesterday.

Sloppy in Seattle

► Pete Carroll serves up decade-old, cold revenge dish to Pats ► Brady struggles with Seattle defense in second half ► Secondary again putrid

What we learned in the Patriots' 24-23 loss in Seattle yesterday:

1 COSTLY MISTAKES ON OFFENSE

The offense continues to pile up the yardage (475 yesterday), but Tom Brady and company coughed up several scoring chances. The decision to go for a touchdown with six seconds left in the first half, a decision that resulted in an intentional grounding by Brady that ended the half, and an interception in the end zone early in the fourth quarter took at least six points off the board. Brady threw another pick in Seattle territory on the prior possession and had a second intentional grounding in the fourth. Number 12 was not sharp at all in the second half.

► The returning Aaron Hernandez made plays early, though not so much in the second half.

2 CAN'T ENTIRELY BLAME THE DEFENSE

The New England defensive unit continues to do two things very well: Force fumbles and stop the run. The Pats have caused nine fumbles in the last three games, recovering all but two of them. The Seahawks lost two of their three fumbles Sunday; the one they recovered was akin to a turnover as Seattle punter Jon Ryan dropped a snap and was engulfed by New England defenders before he could get off a kick. And by limiting Marshawn Lynch to 41 yards on 15 carries, the league's eighth-ranked rushing defense (entering the game) effectively eliminated Seattle's best weapon.

3 YOU ARE THE WEAKEST LINK

That said, the secondary continues to get burned on long passes, mostly down the middle, as was the case on wide receiver Sidney Rice's game-winning 46-yard touchdown grab with 1:18 left. New England entered the game having given up 27 passing plays of 20 yards or more, easily the most in the NFL. Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson had six such completions in this one. There were multiple cases of Patriots defensive backs failing to turn and find a long ball before it was nestled in the opponents' arms. It's open season on the Patriots' secondary, which is quite dangerous in a pass-happy league.

- 4:18: Everyone's favorite Twitter personality, Brandon Spikes, stuffs Marshawn Lynch for a two-yard loss on 3rd and 1.
- 4:25: Breaking news: It's raining in Seattle. Gorgeous 20-yard catch for Brandon Lloyd on the sideline. Even better, next play Brady hits Welker for a 46-yard touchdown. Seahawks safety Earl Thomas got burned doing his best Chung impression. 7-3 Pats.
- 4:43: 20-yard catch for Rob Gronkowski, remember him? Three straight catches for Gronk.

In the news

Hello, Joe?

Former Yankees manager Joe Torre, who currently holds a position in MLB's commissioner's office, could be a big name that surfaces this week in regard to the Red Sox' open managerial position. The Boston Globe's Nick Cafardo reported yesterday morning that "talk is still strong" that the 72-year-old Torre wants to manage again.

In a CBS Sports report later in the day, Torre shot down the rumors, saying he didn't know where they came from.

NFL Roundup

► Nick Mangold gives Mark Sanchez a pat of approval yesterday.

Jets offense on track

- New York back to .500 heading into showdown with Pats next Sunday
 ► Lions whack Eagles ► Dolphins hang on ► Atlanta remains undefeated

Through six Sundays of the NFL season, if you haven't noticed already, there is a lot of parity in the league, as any team can win on any given weekend. This was evident once again yesterday as more than half of the early games were one-possession games in the fourth quarter. Here is a run down of the early games for Week 6:

New York Jets 35 Indianapolis Colts 9

There is not much of a quarterback controversy when your running back rushes for 161 yards and three touchdowns, which is what Jets running back Shonn Greene did in their blowout win over the Colts. Mark Sanchez was an effective 11-for-18 for 82 yards passing and two touchdowns. New York improves to 3-3, while the Colts are now 2-3.

Around the NFL

A look at other scores around the league:

► Tampa Bay 38, K.C. 10 Bucs wide receiver Mike Williams had a monster day catching four passes for 113 yards and a touchdown.

► Cleveland 34, Cincy 24 The Browns scored 21 fourth quarter points to earn their first win of the 2012 season.

► NY Giants 26, San Fran 3 Ahmad Bradshaw rumbled for 116 yards and a touchdown as the Giants stomped the 49ers on the road.

► Buffalo 19, Arizona 16 The Bills got an early safety when Chris Kelsay sacked Kevin Kolb in the end zone and C.J. Spiller (88 yards) helped the Bills in an OT road win.

Detroit Lions 26 Philadelphia Eagles 23

The Lions scored the final 16 points in the contest to earn a three-point overtime win on the road. It was the Eagles' second straight loss as they fall to 3-3, while the Lions improve to 2-3. Jason Hanson's 45-yard field goal in overtime is what ultimately gave the Lions the win, as he also kicked a 19-yard field goal with three seconds remaining in regulation to force the overtime session.

Atlanta Falcons 23 Oakland Raiders 20

Despite scoring only one offensive touchdown, the Falcons were able to defeat the Raiders off the foot of Matt Bryant's 55-yard field goal with one second remaining to remain unbeaten. It was his third field goal of the game. Denarius Moore caught five passes for 104 yards and a touchdown in the loss for the Raiders as they fall to 1-4.

Baltimore Ravens 31 Dallas Cowboys 29

In one of the more exciting finishes of the day, the Ravens were able to hold off the Cowboys at home. Trailing by eight with less than a minute to play, the Cowboys' Dez Bryant caught a four-yard touchdown pass with just over 30 seconds remaining, but then dropped the ensuing two-point conversion. Dallas recovered the onside kick, and Dan Bailey's 51-yard attempt missed wide left. Dallas is now 2-3, while the Ravens are 5-1.

Miami Dolphins 17 St. Louis Rams 14

The Dolphins were able to hang on at home for a three-point win over the Rams, despite only 19 total yards rushing. Rookie quarterback Ryan Tannehill threw for 185 yards and two touchdowns in the win. Despite the loss, Rams quarterback Sam Bradford was impressive, throwing for 315 yards and no interceptions. Both teams are now 3-3.

Fantasy Player of the Day: Shonn Greene, NY Jets, running back. 32 carries, 161 yards, three touchdowns.
